First Wheat Shot This Season By E. Paquette

The first wheat to be sold at Chauvin was sold by Emile Paquette to the Secretary Elevator. He had put four bushels of sheaves through the separator and obtained nearly one hundred bushels from the four loads. The wheat was graded number one and purchased as such by W. Cubitt the elevator man.

The wheat already cut in this district is of a high grade generally. It is expected that a large quantity will grade number two with a good proportion number one, the balance being chiefly number three.

Alberta Crop Report

In the sixth monthly crop report issued by H. A. Craig, deputy minister of agriculture, the first estimate of the yield is given, which places the wheat average at 11 bushels per acre; oats, 25; barley, 20; and rye, 14. These estimates being based on the total acreage sown.

The hay crop generally will be light, except in the northern portion, and the department recommends that all the feed possible be put up, as the likelihood is that the southern farmers will require to ship in a considerable amount.

Farmers who are sowing fall rye are hoppers, as this work has been neglected in many instances where it was evident that their first crop was to be a failure.

Weather conditions have been favorable to filing the grain.

Chauvin School Fair

The Fairs Department have set Monday, Sept. 26th as the date for the Local School Fair. The children and teachers are busy preparing exhibits and the display should be a credit to the district.

EVERYTHING THAT EVERYBODY CAN DO IS NEEDED TO HELP

STOCK INDUSTRY

(By W. F. STEVENS
Secretary Stock Growers' Protective Association)

What can be done to improve our markets for live stock and what will become of our cattle industry if marketing conditions are not improved, are questions that one hears on every hand, and a score of suggestions are required, much of them volunteered as to what ought to be done. One economist says send a delegation to Ottawa to demand that the government fix the price of live cattle for a period of six months or a year; another says, call a conference to discuss the situation; another says, ask for the appointment of a commission; while others say let us organize a pool to hold the cattle off the market temporarily, feed them and send them to market in the spring and so on ad infinitum.

One difficulty with all of the foregoing suggestions is that they require time to get started; the present condition requires immediate action hundred different directions, but all tending to the same end, and is more likely to give the desired result than a single large undertaking which will require much time to organize and large capital to carry on.

A few facts regarding present conditions must be borne in mind and conclusions drawn from them as to the logical result of these facts, before one can determine what is the safest course to pursue, always bearing in mind that an absolutely safe course is impossible "because the best laid plans of mice and men gang aft aglee."

One important fact to be borne in mind is that all of Europe, including Great Britain and Ireland have been and still are suffering from severe drought. Pastures are dried up, the hay and straw crops are short and turnips undersized. This means that cattle that were intended to be marketed as fat beef in September and October are being sent to market now half fat. Stocker cattle that would otherwise have gone into feed lots in September and October are going to slaughter and calves that would ordinarily have been kept and marketed are going to the market now in the form of veal.

What is the natural consequence when such a condition exists over a large area of densely populated country? I see it up as follows:

1st The market is flooded with fresh killed lean beef, and the consequence is that is that such meat is selling at low prices and large quantities are being sent to the frozen and stored away for use when the inevitable shortage takes place later on. 2nd When fat cattle should be coming in off the pastures of England, Scotland and France, they will not be forthcoming because they had already been sent to slaughter in an attempt to take the surplus off the market. 3rd The price of fat cattle and that of the unfinished sort. As time goes on this condition will become more marked. The longer the present drought lasts the more marked will the condition become later on. 4th When the rains come, as they always have after every drought in the past and we presume will do so again, the pastures will begin to improve, a period of stocking up will take place (Continued on inner page)

1500 Acres Damaged By Hail Last Sunday

This district was visited by violent storm last Sunday afternoon and again throughout the hours of the following night. Torrents of rain fell on the whole country side saturating every sheaf and stock. Unfortunately this storm was accompanied by high winds and in parts by hail. The hail damage is confined to two areas, as far as we can learn, namely south and north of town, and affects about 1500 acres, causing damage to from 35 to 75 per cent, with some total damage.

Amongst those who have suffered loss we have heard of Messrs E. J. Coumans; A. Fouché; C. Miller; W. Rodden; C. Roseau; C. W. Ryall; D. Cote; C. Levesque; A. B. Lambert; J. Semple; E. & U. Coumbe; O. Z. Siffert; H. Plouffe; F. Collette. Owing to the phones being out of order we are not in a position to give the names of any others who have suffered loss.

Local Phones Put Out Of Order By Storm

Great inconvenience has been caused by the failure of the telephone service, all day Monday and part of the day on Tuesday. We are informed that the storm on Sunday night is responsible for the interruption. It having destroyed the apparatus for calling up parties required. Central was in a position to receive messages but could not send out any messages other than to answer callers.

The telephone department cannot be complimented upon the speed with which this condition was rectified. It should be possible to get these repairs done within four or five hours at most, instead of one and an half days.

Cattle & Hog Receipts Far Below Last Year

So far this year Canadian stockmen have marketed about 48000 less cattle and 70,000 less hogs than they had up to the same time last year with an increase in the calves shipped in or around 7,000 head and 24,000 more sheep.

Rust And Saw Fly

Rust and saw-fly damage together with damage caused by wind and rain lodging the grain has done a considerable amount of damage to the wheat crop of the province. This is the general tenor of the weekly crop report issued yesterday by the Statistics Branch of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture.

Here and there are areas where brighter conditions prevail and there are points where yields as high as 30 bushels are expected. This, however is not the general situation the province over. The most optimistic reports come from Northwest of their province, where yields will be fair. Harvesting will be well under way in most districts, except where rain is holding the farmers back and in some districts cutting is being commenced but the grain is completely ripened.

The man who has never been in danger cannot answer for his courage.

Conveniently close to the railways in the prairie provinces there are approximately 34,000,000 acres of fertile land capable of producing 170,000,000 bushels of grain per year, with a monetary return of more than $400,000,000. But even the 34,000,000 acres do not at all represent the extent of fertile arable land awaiting cultivation. It has been computed that there are 225,000,000 cultivatable acres in the four Western provinces. Of this there are only 35,000,000 producing at the present time. This leaves 190,000,000 acres yet to be made productive.

Canada has twenty-two universities and thirty-three colleges. In addition there are 30,000 elementary schools, with 23,000 teachers, and an enrolment of nearly 1,500,000 pupils. Lord Burnham, chairman of the Imperial Press Conference, said: "Canada's achievement in its institutions of learning is one of the most striking features of Canadian life."

"Concerning the general laws of the province my belief is that there should be a tendency toward safe sound legislation," says Mr. Brownlee. He favours a consultation with the doctors and druggists with respect to the liquor prescription business.

During the past three years a steady effort has been kept up to increase the number of freight cars on the Canadian National Railways with the result that this year on the railways owned, operated and controlled by this great transportation system 122,000 freight cars are available for all work. During the past three years 21,355 freight cars have been added to the equipment, also quite a number of locomotives of the latest types for present day requirements. The Canadian National will handle a large percentage of Western Canada's wheat crop this year.

Alberta has not yet availed herself of the Dominion grant for highway side by the Federal Government. Improvements $20,000,000 has been set Alberta can file her plans for highway improvement until April 1st 1924.

and immature and unfinished cattle will come to market in much smaller numbers, prices for animals of this class will rise. The height to which they will rise will be in proportion to the depth to which they fall now and that will depend upon the length and severity of the present drought. Then when Great Britain and France get another grain, hay and turnip crop, as it is reasonable to suppose they will, there will be a keen demand for "stores," but they will not be forthcoming from Ireland as in the past because those that would naturally be offered, were slaughtered as calves and yearlings a year previously."

Now this is the course that the trade takes following a long period of severe drought covering a large area. But some one asks: "What assurance have we that these things will follow?" We have none. These are the things that followed the great great drought of the past and we presume they will do the same this time.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

The drought may continue into years but we do not expect it to do so; the economic and financial system of Europe and America may break down to such an extent that business along normal lines will be impossible, but we do not look for that to occur. There may be a social upheaval in Western Europe as in the East, that will destroy the purchasing power of the people there, but we do not expect it to take place; we are looking for the natural thing to happen, but it might not.

If the natural thing should happen, what is the proper thing to do, to make the most of or suffer the least from our present crisis.

H. P. Kennedy of Toronto gave the key-note when he said in his Edmonton address and his Calgary interview: "Keep your stock off the market at the present time." That may be easy for some, but for many other it is next to impossible.

Here is where every recourse of the province and of the Dominion will have to be taxed to the utmost if we are to profit most and suffer least from the present condition. I will presume to offer a few suggestions: (1) Those who have cattle and feed, skill and integrity, should be accorded credit even beyond the limits of what is ordinarily considered safe banking. (2) Those who have feed skill and integrity, should be accorded credit in order that they may be able to buy the animals that must be sold by those who cannot qualify in other respects. (3) Husband every pound of feed available and feed it or have it for sale to the man who wants and knows how to feed it. (4) Sow such biennial crops as will supply a large amount of late fall and early spring pasture, such as winter rye, and thus increase the carrying capacity of the country. (5) Dispose of all inferior animals that are now almost worthless and are at best of little value, but yet make feed scarce for animals which, if properly wintered, will command a good price, later on even though the means of doing so may be unusual or may appear wasteful, because what would ordinarily appear wasteful may be economical now.

A case in point may be cited. Scrub bulls are being sold in Western Canadian stockyards as low as 1 cent per pound. After deducting the freight and commission and other expenses these animals could have returned to their owners more than have $5 to $10 per head. Select hogs are selling from $13 to $15 per cwt. in different parts of Canada. These inferior bulls can be fed to hogs in conjunction with grain and be made to yield much larger returns than that. A two-cent bull can be fed to twelve-cent hogs at a profit and the hay that is saved by getting rid of the bull, and the grain that is saved by feeding him to hogs can be used for feeding better bulls, steers or cows. The same kind of disposition can be made of country at large be the better for the transformation of this inferior stuff into prime bacon. In other words, what to many might appear to be a waste would under present conditions be an economy. The only point on which a precaution is necessary is that the pigs be given practically a full feed of grain before they are turned loose on the carcass. A thousand individual efforts along the lines suggested will accomplish more than the "spectacular pool" in an undertaking of this nature. A small pool may be advisable in a district where feed is abundant and capital or skill is lacking. Government can do much to assist, but that will be by aiding in the extension of credit the opening of new markets, facilitating transportation etc., rather than by actually undertaking the work of feeding the stock. The present condition demands that all the stock, all the feed, all the capital, all the credit, and all the skill of the country must be properly directed and be made the most of to the end that our live stock industry shall not suffer unduly or become completely demoralized because of present conditions.

Canada's Debt To Scotland

Mr. Melghen's Reference to it in His Edinburgh Speeches

London Times: Mr. Melghen, prime minister of Canada, had conferred on him the freedom of Edinburgh in recognition of his representative position and eminent public services. The ceremony took place in the presence of a large gathering in the Usher hall, Bailie Alexander Barrie, acting chief magistrate, presided.

Mr. Melghen having received the burgess ticket in a silver casket and signed the roll of freemen, replied in a speech in which he extolled Scotland and acknowledged Canada's debt to that country. He said that when he woke that morning he saw the soil of Scotland for the first time. As a citizen of Canada even though his ancestors had not been traced east of the Irish sea, he appreciated the debt Canada owed to Scotland. From her rugged hills he had drawn unnumbered thousands of the most rugged of their men. From Scotland's towns and countryside Canada has gathered an equal stream of talented and noble women. Industry, intelligence and high character were the common equipment of both.

They had regarded them not so much as immigrants but as pilgrims who had come to stay. They had stood every test, and had measured every responsibility. They had marched in the forefront of every movement for the spread of education, the teaching of religion, and the establishment of trade. They would still have a fine Canada if they never had Scottish settlers, but it would not have been so good a Canada as strong, so British, (Cheers).

Mr. Melghen was later the guest of the Edinburgh corporation at a luncheon given in the council chambers. When replying to the toast of his health, Mr. Melghen referred to the common friendship and the common composition of the population as their common physical characteristics. Proceeding, he said that the unity of the British empire was the marvel of the world today. Why such unity should survive so many trials the people of other lands found it hard to understand. They knew that the various nations which composed the British empire were different in racial composition, different in geographical neighborhood, different in many fundamentals to the parent state, and knowink of the differences and consequently the different outlook of these peoples, they found it hard to apprehend that we were still one race, one great country, and that in peace and in war, in storm and in sunshine, we faced the world a united empire. (Cheers)

Those who had visited the dominions would understand why it was that they patterned their melodies on Old Country. After all, their political institutions were moulded and modelled after those that they were familiar with in Scotland. Their ideals of life, and their sense of their mission in this world, were just the same as those that animated the people here. If they had to regard themselves as a part of a dull uniformity, embracing all the other dominions and them, selves if they were to follow along lime that were adaptable to a mere inanimate mechanism, they never could continue this empire (Cheers). They had tried to do that once, and they were confronted with disaster, and a large section of the English, speaking race had become a nation by itself, more or less, in an attitude of hostility. They wished never to travel that way again. The war did a great deal to cement the indissoluble union of Canada with the British Isles. It taught them that Britain was a real devotee of the cause of peace, and it taught them that the children of these islands do not test their attitude for war, if it had to come.

In the afternoon, the University of Edinburgh conferred on Mr. Melghen the honorary degree of doctor of law, Mr. Maurice Hankey having the same distinction conferred on him. The principal, Sir Alfred Ewing, presided. The dean of the faculty of laws presented the graduates.

Mr. Melghen, replying said that most, perhaps, than any other race, the Scottish men and women of early days in Canada, set their hearts on education. It was the rule of their lives that whatever else might be denied them, they would lay a foundation on which their children could erect. In the new land, that system of ment which had been the pride of their fathers in the old. Whatever of moral and intellectual virtues Canada enjoyed—and she had much, not in her cities alone and around her cathedrals and colleges, but out on her frontiers and in her country homes—she owed in thait severe self-discipline and that passion for education of her pioneers.

It is not enough to run; one must start in time.

The News of the Week

Canada's fire losses in July amounted to $2,886,250 compared with $1,426,450 last July. Losses for the past seven months total $18,521,300 compared with $14,469,113 for the same period last year.

Saskatchewan's live stock associations are province wide and engage in many activities for the betterment of the live stock of the province. Annual cattle sales and sheep and swine sales are proving more popular each year. Buyers from all over the province attend these sales for the purpose of securing pure bred sires or foundation females as the case may be. There is a great future for these sales; and they, too, are tending to improve the quality of the live stock and interest themselves in the boys' and girls' stock judging and feeding competitions.

British Columbia Experimental farms are leading those of the Dominion in the matter of egg production, according to recent official reports from Ottawa. It is reported that at Agassiz farm 300 eggs from one hen a year is a common thing.

while from 250 to 270 are not considered rare! At the Vancouver Island station 260 pullets gave an average of 195.97, eighty-two going above 200

American and British capital is interested in a syndicate that has been organized to develop extensive high carbon bituminous semi-anthracite and anthracite coal deposits in Calgary district. There are in the area where it is proposed to open mines fourteen seams of coal running from six to thirty-eight feet wide and extending upward from water level from 500 to 1,500 feet. The position of the seams will render mining very economical.

Insistence of How The Home Merchants Are Meeting Competition

The power of dollars and cents is not to be denied by any one of us. We have no means whereby to escape from the economic problems that will persist in daily entering into our life. To be personal: The success of the Chauvin Chronicle is dependent upon the capacity of our readers to buy at home profitably. It is likewise axiomatic that the continued success of our home trader is dependent upon his being able to compete fully for the business that we are all forced to give to someone.

In making purchases there is a certain pleasure and satisfaction in the fact that we can see and inspect the articles we are buying. There is too, undoubtedly advantage in receiving an immediate possession of the goods we have to purchase. At the same time we are forced by reason of the economic pressure bearing upon us all to select the cheapest means for our buying though that may not be the nearest.

From the merchants side the question is fraught with very big difficulties. Only just emerging from credit trading and with a big pile of uncollected accounts as a handicap, also obligations to wholesalers and to bankers, (obligations which should by rights be borne by those who have had the credit) and finally with a market on the down grade, they are exposed to losses from every angle—losses on accounts, losses on goods on shelves, and total loss of business unless they are able to meet competition for today's cash business. No one recognizes the necessity of meeting this competition more than the merchant himself.

To demonstrate to our readers that there is sincerity in our campaign urging folks to buy at home, and to demonstrate to our readers that our local traders are making real earnest efforts, and in many lines successful efforts to meet outside competition, we have asked several of our local merchants to quote lines from their present stock which compete with the latest catalogues issued—the fall and winter ones. Below we give the results:—

The above quotations are but typical of a large number of commodities now being offered for sale by the Merchants of Chauvin.

During the past months on increasing number of orders have been placed with the local merchants instead of being sent for from mail order houses. If you are contemplating making up an order please do in the regular way, but before mailing it place in the hands of any one of these local merchants and ask for their quotation on the parcel. In a large majority of cases they will be
